

ABOUT THE STATE

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST FROM DIFFERENT SECTIONS

A Goshen sportsman out deer hunting found four raccoons asleep in a tree and bagged them all. The skins were worth about $3.50 apiece and the meat is edible.

The ladies of the Shakespeare club in Swanton have made and given to the Red Cross three knitted afghans, one of them being knit by Mrs. S. E. Gladden, who has only one arm. The afghan was so marked before shipment.

Arthur S. Stanley, a teacher in the public schools of Swanton, has received an appointment as second lieutenant in the 2d cavalry, U. S. army, and will report at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 26.

Mrs. Joseph Abair died at her home in Winoski Nov. 22 of blood poisoning following an abscess. The trouble started with a small boil on one side of the nose, which developed an abscess inside the nose, spread in back of one eye and went through her face, blood poisoning developing.

NOT ELIGIBLE TO NAVY.

Unless Unlikely to Be Called in Current Quota for Army.

The U. S. navy recruiting station in Burlington has received the following official notice from the bureau of navigation, navy department, Washington: "On and after Dec. 15 any man desiring to enlist in the U. S. navy must obtain from his local board a certificate to the effect that his class and order number are so low that he is not within the current quota of his local board. By this is meant he is not in class one or class two of the selective service regulations and that the board does not think he will be called in the current quota. It will therefore be advisable for all men who desire to enlist in the navy and who are not skilled in the fullest sense of the word, in some mechanical line of work, who are not married, who have any doubt regarding their status in the selective service and who do not desire to be drafted, to enlist in the navy before the 15th of December, as after that date all men must have a certificate from the local board to the effect that his class and number are so low that he will not be called in the current quota.

"Until Dec. 15, the present plan will still be in effect, that a man may enlist in the navy up until the time his name is posted for the draft, and afterwards he cannot enlist.

RAT-PROOF HOMES.

At Slight Expense, Rodents May Be Excluded.

In constructing dwelling houses the additional cost of making them rat-proof is slight compared with the advantages, says a recent farmers' bulletin of the United States department of agriculture, "House Rats and Mice." The cellar walls, says the bulletin, should have concrete footings, and the walls themselves should be laid in cement mortar. The cellar floor should be of medium rather than lean concrete. Even old cellars may be made rat-proof at comparatively small expense. Rat holes may be permanently closed with a mixture of cement sand, and broken glass, or sharp bits of crockery or stones.

On a foundation like the one described above, the walls of a wooden dwelling also may be made rat-proof. The space between the sheathing and lath, to the height of about a foot, should be filled with concrete. Rats can not then gain access to the walls, and can enter the dwelling only through doors or windows. Screening all basement and cellar windows with wire netting is a most necessary precaution.

In both city and country, wooden floors of sidewalks, areas, and porches are commonly laid upon timbers resting on the ground. Under such floors rats have a safe retreat from nearly all enemies. The conditions can be remedied in towns by municipal action requiring that these floors be replaced by others made of cement. Areas or walks made of brick are often undermined by rats and may become as objectionable as those of wood. Wooden floors of porches should always be well above the ground.

SHEEP RAISING IN VERMONT.

Boston Paper Thinks the Pastures Will Not Allow It.

In another column, we publish an interesting letter on sheep farming from Mr. A. C. Bigelow, who may be regarded as the father of the "more-sheep movement" in this country. Mr. Bigelow takes exception to certain statements made and misgivings expressed in an article on sheep farming which The Transcript published on Nov. 7. He questions the statement that the ordinary effect of turning sheep upon poor New England hillside pastures is to exterminate the grass and erode the pastures, quoting in refutation of this statement an account of the fertilizing effect of sheep on certain English pastures. It seems to us that Mr. Bigelow's view of this question is based on conditions which do not generally prevail in New England. It is undoubtedly true that under well-regulated agricultural conditions, with sheep pastures with a well-rooted turf in mellow and well-watered soil, and particularly in England or in our own level and fertile regions, the effect of sheep pasturing is indeed to maintain fertility. But the writer of this is quite ready to conduct Mr. Bigelow to hill pastures in Vermont which were utterly finished by an attempt at sheep pasturing. The impoverished grass was first eaten to the ground, and then the voracious rains descended upon the bare earth, the soil was washed away and the hillside so hopelessly gullied that it can never be put to any other use than that of a pasture. And what has been the effect of continued sheep pasturing on the semi-arid ranges of our western plains and mountain region? Has it not completely exhausted them, involving a large expenditure for fencing and for systematic restoration of the grasses with cultivation?

The simple fact is that successful sheep farming requires care, attention, scientific methods, and consequently capital and labor, and requires them in large measure than the average New England farmer is able to give under prevailing conditions. There was a time when the raising of merino sheep was very profitable, particularly in Vermont. That was at the time when the sheep growers of the West and of Australia found it profitable to cross high-bred merinos with their native coarse-wooled stock, and when rams and ewes from Vermont were therefore in great demand. The market was soon glutted. The demand for breeding stock ceased. The western and Australian competition ruined the eastern farmers' market for wool. At the same time, the dairy industry, favored by the growth of cities and populous factory towns, and by the development of the creamery system of manufacturing butter, grew to leading consequence in agricultural New England. Farmers all went into it. There was nothing else but the cow. Yet in line of work, who are not married, who have any doubt regarding their status in the selective service and who do not desire to be drafted, to enlist in the navy before the 15th of December, as after that date all men must have a certificate from the local board to the effect that his class and number are so low that he will not be called in the current quota.

This applies to men between the ages of 21 and 31.

profitably. That is about all there is in the sheep situation. The farmer will never get rich by adding a flock of 25 or 30 sheep to his possessions, turning them out in the back pasture to be decimated by dogs, and leaving those that survive to gnaw his already impoverished pastures to the very bone, while he is himself milking and caring for his cows, raising the hay and ensilage and hauling the purchased feed that nourishes his stock, and carrying his milk to the station or the creamery or separating his cream and marketing that. Like his brother on the western plains, the New England farmer may find that it involves a good deal of skill to be a cow man and a sheep man at the same time.—Boston Transcript.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally, I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no loss of time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write me. Eugene M. Pullen, carpenter, 7822 Marcellus avenue, Massachussetts, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any other who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

Auction Sale

—OF—
Real Estate and Personal Property!

As I have purchased the Charles N. Barber farm in Barre Town and shall move there soon, I will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, on at 1 o'clock sharp in the afternoon, on the premises where I now live, known as the Theodore Wood or Henry Egglefield farm, situated on Hollister hill, 1 1/2 miles from Plainfield village, Vt., the following:

MY NICE HOME FARM
which contains 100 acres of land, 60 acres in tillage, balance pasture and woodland, wood and timber owned by the farm and then some. Sugar orchard of 600 trees, splendid grassed fruit orchard—all kinds. Tillage land lays nearly level, is in fine state of cultivation, dark loam soil for which this section is famous. Farm cuts 75 tons of hay and other crops. Large 14-room house finished in hard wood, slate and tin roof, is very convenient with closets and pantry, ample porches, basement under all, with granite walls. Artesian well furnishes never-failing water. One-fourth mile to school, on R. F. D. and telephone lines. Large basement barn 40x80 with lean-to stable fronting the South, which makes it warm and pleasant, can tie 38 head of cattle. One other barn 30x40, large silo, granary and workshop. This is an up-to-date farm, grand view from the buildings, a pleasant and attractive home, one of the best in the county, and a big money-making proposition.

PERSONAL PROPERTY—As I have no hay on the farm which I have purchased, and as I shall be engaged this winter in cutting wood and lumber, I have decided to sell my nice herd of cows and some young stock.

26 HEAD OF CATTLE

Consisting of 19 EXTRA GOOD COWS, grade Holsteins, Ayrshires, Guernseys, and Jerseys, some now fresh, 10 to fresh, in the next two weeks, balance early winter, practically all young and good size, it will be hard to find a better lot. These are the kind you are looking for. An accurate description as to ages and condition of fresh cows is given. One 3-year-old registered Guernsey bull—good one. Six head of yearlings and calves. Two shoats that weigh about 150 lbs. each. One dump cart, corn harvester, set of 2-horse traverse sleds, some other articles and some dry stock wood; 30 tons of nice, early-cut hay and 150 bushels of corn on the cob. This property will be sold as an advance, and you will have to look around quite a bit before finding a better farming proposition or a better lot of cows. The owner will be pleased to show the property at any time before the sale. Lunch furnished those coming from a distance. Terms at time of sale.
